The IALL Course in Atlanta

IALL's 36th Annual Course on International Law and Legal Information was held in Atlanta, Georgia, USA – from 22nd – 26th October – and it was on all counts a tremendous success, more so when keeping in mind the short time frame the Local Planning Committee was given to organize it.

The highly informative and one-of-a-kind program that could only be possible in Atlanta, was the result of careful, sensitive and intelligent planning by the members of the Committee. The Committee excelled in the organizational stakes together with being friendly and helpful hosts, something for which the state of Georgia is renowned. Congratulations and sincere thanks are duly deserved and bestowed upon each of the Committee members.

An email sent out to the IALL e-list on 21 November by the Chair of the Local Planning Committee, Christina Glon, has requested all attendees to please fill in the Survey:

Below is a link to a brief survey asking your thoughts on everything from the program and venue to the outings and events. The survey is short and your honest feedback is sincerely requested:

The official photographer and Committee member, Avery Le, posted an email directing attendees to the photos she took during the Course:

As promised, here is the shared folder of most of the photos I took at the IALL Annual Course:

I set it so that you can add your own photos of IALL also, so if you have any that you would like to share with the delegates, please feel free to upload or drag and drop it into the folder as well.

Several people have written informative blogs on the various topics presented including the pre-conference Workshop under the heading, IALL 2017 Recap, which may be viewed at DipLawMatic Dialogues

A report on the Atlanta Course, Thank you, Atlanta! written by the IALL President, Jeroen Vervliet, may be viewed on the IALL Blog.
